I first met Nan at Western Michigan. She was a dynamic girl who had a love for life. Studying, working at Waldo library or helping someone filled her schedule. We renewed our friendship about two years ago. She never changed. In fact, her intensity increased over the years. Loving her family, teaching Sunday school, giving, giving, giving filled her life. God called her home too early, but her work here was done. There is a hollowness in my life.
