“ Granny, you've always been the one I wanted when I was ill, nobody would do but you. Nobody could remedy my pain and make me better like you could. Even as an young adult when you cared for me for weeks, tending to me just as you did when I was young. I'll never forget and will forever be grateful for everything that you have done. Even when I didn't think it was fair, like making me get my own switch, lol. Now as an older and hopefully wiser man, if asked what's the meaning to life? I can say it's to experience love that we learn to love deeper, happiness to hold onto each other tighter, pain so that we are stronger, moments of weakness that teach us to be strong, and loss so that we are grateful. Not being able to hear you say "now Eric Eugene I said..." is difficult. Thankfully we have each other and the knowledge in the fact that you're no longer in pain. I'm sure you're scootn-bootn to some great tunes and fishing in the greatest of the waters. Grab a seat and tell Grandpa to hold on while give 'em hell!!! IYKYK

LOVE YOU GRANNY!!!
